MAGYAR, ENDRES PLAN RETURN HOP

Hungarian War Minister
Recommends Medals for Atlantic Fliers.

BUDAPEST, Hungary, July 17.—(AP)—Refreshed after one trans-Atlantic flight, Captains Alexander Magyar and George Endres tonight considered flying back to New York from Budapest in their monoplane Justice for Hungary.

Among the many congratulatory telegrams that arrived today, mostly from America, Captain Magyar said he was offered of financial backing from undisciplined enthusiasts for a return flight.

The plan to fly back from Budapest to New York with the Justice for Hungary appeals to me, as I hope it will appeal to the world," Captain Magyar said.

All day crowds of sightseers, led by a gipsy orchestra, stood around the Justice of Hungary, which came down last night near the village of Biske.

Judge Rules That Dog May Bark To Save Home

CHICAGO, July 17.—(UP)—A dog has an inalienable right to bark in the middle of the night if his master's property is being disturbed, Judge Leon Edelmann ruled today. Two police dogs had aroused the complaint of a neighborhood when they barked at some small boys throwing pebbles at their master's house.

14 miles from Budapest, after a non-stop crossing of 2,229 miles from Harbor Grace, N. F.

As a reward for their exploit, the two were informed by M. Gombo, Hungarian minister of war, that he had recommended that the highest order, the service medal, first class, carrying the title of "excellency," be conferred on them at the official reception Monday.

The fliers, with Admiral Nicholas Horvath, regent of Hungary, paid a visit to their plane today.

They wanted to repair the damaged propeller, wheel and undercarriage themselves, but they were persuaded by officials to have the plane towed to Matyasföld airfield, as it was unsafe to take off from the urban maize field in which they landed.

Captain Magyar said they had intended bringing their ship down to a landing where they might have, but just as they were about to land Captain Endres, who was piloting, saw two farm carts in the road.

STIRBLING'S VALOR REVEALED IN FILM

Max Schmeling really did get the best of that fight in Cleveland, July 3, the official pictures, which opened Friday at the Capitol theater, bear witness to the veracity of our sports department. Yet it was a pity that we already knew the outcome of the fight, otherwise we might have had the pleasure of hoping that the Georgian boy, after all, might win. It was difficult not to catch oneself hoping anyway, as spirited was his attack and so admirable the showing he made. But the sports department was right. Schmeling won.

The blow that did for Stirling was a vicious right cross that looked, as though it might have snapped a vertebra or some even more essential mechanism. Stirling seemed to hesitate for a moment, as though still incredulous of the power behind that blow. But a wave of sick realization followed and the hopelessly tired, hopelessly battered Georgian pitched forward on his face.

After that, up till the time the fight was stopped by the referee, it was the battle of the Clinchey. Sheer pride forced the southerner back to his knees, caused his inert body to lunge at the German, as though to hear him down by the dead weight of it. Sheer southern pride, the pride that drove Pickens' cavalry one hot afternoon down the throats of the federal guns.

Well, Max got the best of it. But all the same when you see the picture you will agree with those eastern boys who said it was Max's fight all the way. You ask yourself where were the Georgian's brains? Why did he expose his body to all that apparently unnecessary punishment? Why did he allow Schmeling to outbox him? But you never ask, why doesn't he get in there and fight.

The fictional part of the program is Edward Everett Horton, Mr. Horton plays the part of a butler playing the part of a gentleman. Both roles are executed well and in a highly amusing fashion.

Mexican Warden Beaten By Women Prisoners

FOUR KILLED IN WRECK CAUSED BY HIGH WIND

Box Cars Propelled From Siding Into Path of Passenger Train.

HORACE, Kan., July 17.—(AP)—Four men were killed and three were injured late last night in the collision of a westbound local passenger train and four box cars propelled from a siding by a high wind.

The victims, sleeping for the night in one of the side-tracked box cars, were not identified. The train crew and passengers escaped injuries.

A severe wind and rain storm swept the freight cars from the switch. They raced eastward on the main line with the gale. A mile and a half from the city, the runaway string struck the engine of the local.

One freight car was hurled to the top of the locomotive. Another, the sleeping quarters of the victims, was smashed to pieces. Wrecking crews were sent to the scene at once to start clearing the track.

Local authorities receiving word of a report to the Pueblo (Col.) dispatcher's office that the victims were truck gardeners, pressed efforts to identify them.

UNION AGENT, GUARD KILLED IN SALOON

CHICAGO, July 17.—(AP)—Two men shot to death in a saloon were disclosed Thursday as a union agent and his bodyguard.

The men were L. C. Murphy, business agent for the West Side Teamsters Union, and Harry Diehm, alias Davis. Police believe they were early Thursday morning residents of a rooming house in Chicago.

The two men who shot Murphy and Diehm ordered the dozen men in the saloon to "stick 'em," without another word, they fired at the victims, turned and ran.

Diehm, who had at least a dozen allies, brandished a .38-caliber revolver and shot at the boys and girls. He was sentenced to three years for larceny in Detroit and was tried and acquitted of murder in Chicago.

Dynamite and other equipment commonly used by saboteurs were found in Murphy's apartment.

'Ma' Kennedy's Ardor Is Cooled As Predecessor Seeks Divorce

LOS ANGELES, July 17.—(AP)—The Rev. G. Edward Hudson, husband of Mrs. Minnie (Ma) Kennedy, was sued today for divorce by her attorney, who filed a motion for summary judgment in the Los Angeles Superior Court.

Mrs. Kennedy-Hudson charged cruelty, desertion, misconduct with another woman and adultery.

Her attorneys indicated that she would appear as a prosecution witness against Hudson if bigamy charges are filed in Washington, where he married Mrs. Kennedy, mother of the evangelist, Alcee Semple McPherson, last June 28.

The Rev. Mr. Hudson, who was known as a New York minister at the time of his marriage in Longview, Wash., in a romantic midwest ceremony on the shores of a moonlit lake, remained in seclusion today.

Mrs. Kennedy, however, held lengthy "gold digging" designs against her husband. She said he would have to "fight his battles" in straightened circumstances.

Reversing previously declared intentions, Mrs. Kennedy indicated later that she has abandoned hope of another wedding to Hudson.

After hearing of the divorce suit and learning that she could not remarry for more than a year, Mrs. Kennedy-Hudson said: "If the other lady considers herself my wife, I will gladly relinquish him to her and perform a new marriage ceremony for them myself and give them our rings and my blessing."

Mrs. Hudson-Hudson said she did not know the name of the woman mentioned in her charges of misconduct but alleged that the latter and Hudson lived together here for a period after April 1, 1930. On that date, Mrs. Hudson said, he left her with about $300 in household bills unpaid.

About February 15, 1930, Mrs. Hudson said, she went with Hudson on a trip to San Jose, where he left her without paying the hotel bill.

Mrs. Hudson-Hudson asserted in her divorce petition that Hudson has an income of about $500 a month in the advertising business and asked he be compelled to pay her $5,000 alimony in a lump sum.

Nashville Girl Freed Unhurt by Kidnaper

NASHVILLE, Tenn., July 17.—(AP)—Four-year-old Ruth Gill, said by her mother to have been kidnapped by a former lover, was found at dawn today in the kitchen at the home of an uncle, a dollar bill clenched in her hand, and a field of two sleepless nights in her eyes.

The child told her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charlton Gill, that "Tucker" brought her to the home, referring to Charles Tucker, whom Mrs. Gill later learned her rejected suitor.

Mrs. Gill told authorities Tucker seized the child upon a play Tuesday afternoon after the mother refused to accompany him. She said she had kept company with Tucker prior to a reconciliation with her husband Monday night. Gill said they had been estranged six months.

A warrant charging Tucker with kidnapping the child has been sworn to by Mrs. Gill and her husband said he would insist on prosecution if Tucker is located.

WHEAT PRICE OUTLOOK GLOOMY, U. S. REPORTS

Stone Again Denies Federal Grain Is Being "Dumped."

WASHINGTON, July 17.—(AP)—Chairman Stone, of the farm board, issued a formal statement today to emphasize that stabilization wheat is not being sold in the southwest in competition with the new crop.

He reiterated that the board "is doing and will continue to do everything it can under the law to help farmers meet their present difficult situation."

Meanwhile, the agriculture department said present prospects and indicated demand point to another year of low wheat prices for the world as a whole.

No bumper world crop is expected, it said, but the existing large stocks of old wheat in North America, Argentina and Australia "promise a plentiful world supply even though yields should be very low."

It added, however, that if a world crop smaller than 1930 should materialize as are the expectations, "there may be some improvement in the world market prices in the latter part of the 1933-32 season as compared with the early part."

Stone said all wheat sold in the southwest to meet mill or storage requirements since the 1931 harvest began had been replaced by purchase of other wheat.

The Stabilization Corporation has sold approximately 1,000,000 bushels in the northwest spring wheat section so that millers could continue operation.

"The sales were made," Stone said, today, "only after the mill had notified the stabilization corporation, in writing, that it would have to close down unless it got old spring wheat to take care of its milling requirements. These sales in no way compete with the price of the new hard winter wheat being marketed in the southwest."

Farm leaders have appealed to the farm board to agree to hold all 200,000,000 or more bushels of stabilization wheat from the market in the belief such a promise would bring about an immediate price rise.

The board, acting, according to Stone, in the best interests of all farmers, announced in reply it would limit its sales to 60,000,000 bushels this year exclusive of sales to foreign governments under consideration. This included sales to millers in the northwest which have been made since June.

MEXICAN CONSUL FREE IN DRY CASE

Accusation Dropped After Official Conference in Oklahoma City.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., July 17. (AP)—City officials tonight dismissed charges of possession and manufacture of beer, which were lodged against Senator Hermenegildo Valdez, Mexican consul, following an investigation last Monday.

Decision to dismiss the charges came a few hours after Senator Valdez had been booked at police headquarters and released on his own recognizance. Miss Kay Barrett, his sister-in-law, in whose home Senator Valdez lived, was booked on similar charges, and it also was decided not to press the charges against her.

Decision to drop the case was reached after John McClelland, city manager, had conferred with John Watt, chief of police.

Members of the police vice squad said they found "46 pints of beer and eight gallons of beer making" at Miss Barrett's home, where they found Valdez.

Both Valdez and Miss Barrett earlier were released on their own bond after a conference with Chief Watt. Valdez maintained that as an official representative of the Mexican government he was immune from the prohibition laws of this country.

Advised of the affair, Governor Murray said:

"They shouldn't have done it." "Diplomatic immunity," he said, "should protect the consul so long as there was no charge of sale."

"Doug" Fairbanks Will Specialize In Travel Movies

BY HUBBARD KEAVY.
HOLLYWOOD, Cal., July 17. (AP)—Doug Fairbanks, hero of scores of thrilling stories of the screen and out of film's greatest stars, has turned his back on the swashbuckling figure he made famous.

He has given up, definitely, his long and colorful career as an actor of fiction, but he is not going to quit the screen where he earned a fortune. Instead he will appear in the future only in travel pictures.

The swarthy, vigorous "Doug" sat in his study today and told of his new plans for the screen.

"I do not intend to make any more pictures based on fiction, plays or novels," he said. "However, I am now completing a travel picture of my experiences in my recent tour of the world and I believe it will be far superior in entertainment to any fictional romance I could make."

"As to the future, I plan to appear only in films recording my travels." His reason for giving up the old pictures is that the talkies are too slow.

C. C. JULIAN RELEASED FROM JAIL ON BOND

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., July 17. (AP)—C. C. Julian, Oklahoma and California oil promoter, held on a federal mail fraud charge, was released from jail late today on bond, only to learn that other suits have been added to his extensive legal difficulties.

Secretary of Labor Davis came from Pennsylvania, giving that state another direct connection with the oil situation.

Discussions at the first meeting of President Harding's cabinet related to the political situation—that is, what the people of the United States probably expected of the administration, as indicated by their vote. The League of Nations, we all agreed, had been definitely voted against. On foreign debts we all agreed there should be no cancellations.

The general feeling was that, in concluding peace, the United States should ask nothing for her services in the war.

The impression that a cabinet meeting is a free-for-all discussion of national affairs is erroneous. There are times, of course, when, at the president's request, every member joins in a discussion, but usually the meeting consists of reports of the various officers to the president concerning matters in their respective departments.

The president talks directly to each department head in turn. The others listen, or are supposed to be listening. Some of them in the Harding administration, when the president asked Secretary Denby and myself about legal aspects of the naval reserve leases, apparently didn't hear a thing. It has been denied that they were even discussed before the cabinet.

Often Harding would ask a member to remain after the session to discuss some special subject. I have seen the entire cabinet waiting, after an official session, to see the president individually.

It became unintentionally the kicker of the cabinet. It got so I was expected to make objections. Most of the rest of them were more reserved. I wish now that I had been. For every time I kicked about something I made an enemy, and in later years all these little disaffections piled up against me. As we say, "cut me, but don't speak too often."

Coal Row. One of the biggest rows in the cabinet came up over acts of the attorney-general, Harry M. Daugherty, during the coal strike. He had named a new coal strike board, and a danger of suffering in many sections. But in a brief discussion we had decided to wait a little, hoping things would iron themselves out.

On the advice of one of his assistants Daugherty started a course of action which was first to prepare suits to force the railroads into receivership, bringing them under government control, so he could put troops on them; and second, to seek an injunction against the labor unions, and, as a further means of tying the unions up, to seize accumulated funds from the organizations, the funds on which they were financing their strike.

Next time Daugherty came into cabinet meeting he found things pretty hot.

BY ALBERT B. FALL

(Copyright, 1931, by N. A. N. A., Inc.)

Editor's Note: This is the fourth of a series of articles in which Albert B. Fall, sentenced to prison for having accepted a bribe while he was secretary of the interior, tells his own story of his experiences in Washington.

The Constitution does not present the series as a defense of his former secretary of the interior, though Fall, convicted and resigned to his term in prison, naturally gives his side of one of the biggest stories the country ever knew.

Senator John Wingate Weeks, Massachusetts, was a personal friend of Warren G. Harding. His appointment to the cabinet was another based on friendship rather than strict political considerations.

Weeks wanted to be secretary of the navy. He was a graduate of Annapolis, and had an interest in naval affairs.

It is traditional that appointments to the navy and war departments go to men as far removed from the military as possible. This is to avoid the internal politics that affects the military. No group is more solidly interested in politics than our military officers. They have little active direct influence, but when they oppose anything they are formidable opposition.

Harding suspected there might be opposition to Weeks' appointment as secretary of the navy, and so made him secretary of war.

I never knew exactly what considerations governed President Harding's appointment of Edwin Denby, Michigan, as secretary of the navy. Of course Denby had political influence from his position in the world war reserve, and he went into the marines as a major in the World War, and came out a major. He was a graduate of Annapolis and had been a member of congress.

Denby Takes Side. In cabinet deliberations Harding, I observed, always paid a great deal of attention to Denby. When later, criticism and insinuations were flung at me, Denby was the only man in the cabinet who publicly and fearlessly took my side, when he might easily have remained silent and spared himself from the heat of attacks.

Because he distributes most of the patronage of the postmaster general office, as I've said, the most political of the officers in the cabinet, Will H. Hays, able politician, who had received the Taft and Roosevelt wings of the republican party, and who had been himself a member of the cabinet at conventions, was the logical man for this key place. In this instance I think more than any other, Harding bowed to the power of politics in making the appointment.

Hays retired before his term was completed. I went into the cabinet with the express understanding between Harding and myself that I would stay only one year. When the year was up and I wanted to retire, Harding asked me to stay. He pointed out that with Hays gone, I would be leaving no close together, stories might be circulated that there was ill will in the cabinet.

Henry M. Wallace, Harding's secretary of agriculture, an Iowan, was editor of a farm paper, as was his predecessor, Meredith, under the Wilson administration.

Secretary of Labor Davis came from Pennsylvania, giving that state another direct connection with the oil situation.

Discussions at the first meeting of President Harding's cabinet related to the political situation—that is, what the people of the United States probably expected of the administration, as indicated by their vote. There are times, of course, when, at the president's request, every member joins in a discussion, but usually the meeting consists of reports of the various officers to the president concerning matters in their respective departments.

The president talks directly to each department head in turn. The others listen, or are supposed to be listening. Some of them in the Harding administration, when the president asked Secretary Denby and myself about legal aspects of the naval reserve leases, apparently didn't hear a thing. It has been denied that they were even discussed before the cabinet.

Often Harding would ask a member to remain after the session to discuss some special subject. I have seen the entire cabinet waiting, after an official session, to see the president individually.

It became unintentionally the kicker of the cabinet. It got so I was expected to make objections. Most of the rest of them were more reserved. I wish now that I had been. For every time I kicked about something I made an enemy, and in later years all these little disaffections piled up against me. As we say, "cut me, but don't speak too often."

Coal Row. One of the biggest rows in the cabinet came up over acts of the attorney-general, Harry M. Daugherty, during the coal strike. He had named a new coal strike board, and a danger of suffering in many sections. But in a brief discussion we had decided to wait a little, hoping things would iron themselves out.

On the advice of one of his assistants Daugherty started a course of action which was first to prepare suits to force the railroads into receivership, bringing them under government control, so he could put troops on them; and second, to seek an injunction against the labor unions, and, as a further means of tying the unions up, to seize accumulated funds from the organizations, the funds on which they were financing their strike.

Next time Daugherty came into cabinet meeting he found things pretty hot.

"He has laid this cabinet, Mr. President," I said, "open to criticism. The thing is to get to know you and this cabinet have sanctioned his acts. I think he should be reprimanded right here."

I added that if the attorney-general were going to be permitted to do such high-handed, damn-fol things, my resignation was in.

Theodore Roosevelt Jr. present as the representative of Secretary Denby, who was away on official business, said:

"I feel the same way, Mr. President. It seems to me the attorney-general has gone too far."

"I feel much along the same line," said Secretary Hoover.

By that time, encouraged by this support, I was growing warmer. You don't know any more, I shouted at Daugherty, "and you can't learn any. You say you will take your marshals, your army of United States marshals and secret service men, and man, they're not your marshals. They're officers of the court. You have nothing to do with them, except to nominate them for appointment by the president."

Daugherty gripped the sides of his chair. President Harding looked at me sternly. He looked like a school teacher after a bad boy.

"Albert," he said, dropping the formal "Mr. Secretary," "I want to see you after this meeting."

When we were alone, he said:

"I wish you wouldn't ride the attorney-general like that. You're too hard on him. I don't want to hear any more outbursts about resigning, either."

I apologized. And I was glad when the strike was settled by the involved elements and the emergency removed.

Harding was a man of great poise. I never once heard him criticize a member of the cabinet. But one day, following a meeting he did let out one of his innermost thoughts concerning the man in his official family. He said nothing that I could recall, he said, looking back at the old vacant room and the empty chairs:

"I wish every man around that table except yourself, and you don't count because you're from a little state with no great influence, has his eye on my job. They all have their day to be president—including that little fellow at the end of the table."

That "little fellow at the end of the table" seldom speaking but always awake to everything said, was Calvin Coolidge, then vice president.

I don't believe Harding ever dreamed, however, that he had two future presidents in his cabinet.

And I know I never dreamed that 10 years later one of those former cabinet members would have indirectly hinted in a public address that several of Harding's closest friends—by inference, in referring to courts, including myself—had "betrayed" Harding's trust, and thus hastened his death.

TEN LIVES CLAIMED BY LIGHTNING BOLTS

Two Others Are Drowned as Storms Break Heat Wave Over Nation.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, July 17. (AP)—Four persons were killed by lightning and widespread damage was done to crops and farm buildings by wind and electric storms that swept into Ohio from the northwest tonight in the wake of a two-day record heat wave.

The East Bay shore district of Toledo was hit by wind and lightning which tore down trees and tangled light and power lines. Wade Marsh, 26, of Curatie, was killed by lightning while at work on a farm.

William Frisbie, 35, was killed by lightning at a Boy Scout camp near Zanesville.

James Crawford, 13, was killed by lightning as he rode in a farm wagon near East Louisville. The bolt also killed the team of horses hitched to the wagon.

Communications were disrupted both in Cleveland and Columbus. The storms broke a heat wave in Ohio, which in the past two days was responsible for 13 deaths and had sent the mercury to peak figures of 99 and 100 degrees.

Prison Fire Hero Held as Starter Of Jail Blaze

ENID, Okla., July 17. (AP)—Joe Ingram, county prisoner who won his freedom by heroism displayed in a $100,000 fire that destroyed the Garfield county court house and jail last January, was held today on a charge of starting the fire.

Sheriff Joe Gavin arrested Ingram last night and said he was seeking two other men, prisoners at the time, on warrants charging them with being co-federates of Ingram in the arson plot.

Ingram made several trips into smoke-filled cells of the jail to guide prisoners to safety, but Sheriff Gavin said investigation had revealed Ingram knew where the fire was started and could calculate the amount of risk he was taking in rescue work.

The sheriff obtained his evidence against Ingram through prisoners and former prisoners. He charged that Ingram and two other men dipped a mop of disinfectant fluid, broke a hole through the plastered ceiling of the jail, and setting fire to the mop, spread it to the ceiling. More than 50 prisoners were in the jail.

Predicted Showers Turn Back on City

Conditions are not so good for rain today, according to C. F. von Herrmann, meteorologist at the station in the Mississippi valley, which local authorities have been banking on to bring the city cooling showers, is moving westward instead of eastward. However, there is a possibility, though a meager one, that rain will fall this afternoon, said von Herrmann.

The temperature today will be moderate, he stated, with slight if any variation from that of Friday. Friday the day started off at 75 degrees, and the temperature reached the maximum for the day with a reading of 94, just a little hotter than usual.

DIRIGIBLE PURTAN DAMAGED IN SQUALL
TRAVERSE CITY, Mich., July 17. (UP)—A sudden squall wrecked the Goodyear dirigible Puritan late today at its mooring mast on the fairgrounds of the National Cherry Festival, reducing it to a twisted mass of fabric and twisted metal.

One man, whose name could not be learned, was injured when he was thrown from the dirigible as it was being towed. H. S. Shepard and two co-pilots were in the gondola, but escaped unhurt.

The blimp had been carrying passengers in front of the dirigible. It was landed and moored when a storm threatened. Despite the efforts of a ground crew of 50 men the dirigible was not recovered. The ship was smashed by the wind against the mooring mast.

Goodyear officials said the craft could probably be salvaged. Damage was estimated at $12,000.

$500,000 TOLL TAKEN BY BLAZE IN DETROIT
DETROIT, July 17. (UP)—The Studebaker lodge for unemployed men, one of the two city lodging houses, from which a thousand jobless men were evicted a week ago for lack of funds, was destroyed by fire tonight. The flames also destroyed two warehouses of the Studebaker Motor Company and a Michigan Central railroad viaduct for a total estimated damage of $500,000.

New Stage, Screen Programs In Atlanta Theaters Today

Robert Montgomery in his second starring picture plays at the Fox on the new program starting today. The picture is "The Man in Possession" and he is joined by a lot of other far better production than its predecessor in the Montgomery library.

It is the story of an English young man who is sentenced to jail for one of those infractions of the law which hardly involve any moral turpitude at all. But his father and older brother object to a "jailbird" in the family and want to deport him overseas. In the end, he goes, but only after he has stirred things up a lot in Mayfair and he takes them with him.

On the stage the Fanchon and Marco contribution for the week is the "African" idea with lots of clever principals and really exceptional Sun-kist Beauties.

Bobby Jones golf picture, Enrico Leide and the orchestra, Al Evans at the organ and other short added attractions complete the program.

NANCY CARROLL STARS IN GEORGIA PICTURE
When Nancy Carroll and Fredric March make a new picture it is, invariably, an entertainment event. Now they have made "The Night Angel" the feature of the new bill which opens its week's run at the Georgia theater today.

"The Night Angel" action centers around "The Duck"—a cabaret of questionable flavor which is owned by an impoverished countess. Her daughter, Nancy Carroll, is an entertainer in this pleasure resort for the tired businessmen of Prague, and Alan Hale is the bouncer of the place.

Fredric March is the prosperous young lawyer who is elected city prosecutor who decides as his first step in office, to "clean up" the cabaret. The story evolved from this situation is said to stand as a most gripping piece of entertainment with both Nancy Carroll and Fredric March playing exceptionally suitable roles.

The new show boasts an unusually strong vaudeville bill headed by the master entertainer, Dave Apollon, the renowned Russian star in "March-Melody"—and Dance Humor." The stage bill also includes Major, Sharp and Minor, "The Singing Sinners," a trio of beautiful girls in novel but many numbers, and Homer Romaine in aerial eccentricities.

Fight Film at Capitol.
The picture which the Schmeling-Stribling fight center interest in the new show at the Capitol, which opened Friday and which is reviewed in another column of this paper.

In addition to the fight film, the program includes "Once a Gentleman," with Edward Everett Horton, Lois Wilson and others, and news-reel and short subjects.

GOOLSBY CONDITION REMAINS CRITICAL
MARSHALL, Texas, July 17. (AP)—Hope for recovery of Thomas Scott Goolsby's memory were somewhat dimmed today by the continued seriousness of his condition, his parents and wife announced.

At first their joy over his recovery of memory had overshadowed their worry over his critical condition, but today they watched anxiously at his bedside as his condition remained unchanged.

Goolsby, who was injured Tuesday in an automobile accident, was unconscious most of the day today. Physicians said he had a good chance of recovery.

TUCKER FAITHFULL TO BECOME MODEL
NEW YORK, July 17. (AP)—Tucker Faithfull, sister of Starr Faithfull, whose mysterious drowning caused an international sensation a few weeks ago, is going to be an artist's model.

She will pose for a commercial photographer for gowns and hats, her stepfather announced today. He said she had no theatrical contracts as yet.

ASPHYXIA BLAMED IN RALEIGH DEATH
RALEIGH, N. C., July 17. (AP)—A coroner's jury tonight returned a verdict that the death of B. Mabry Hart, wealthy Tarboro, N. C. cotton manufacturer, early today in a hotel here was caused by asphyxiation.

Hart's body was found in the bathroom of his hotel room shortly after he had extinguished a blaze in the room.

The verdict was returned after Dr. C. C. Carpenter, pathologist of Wake Forest representing a committee of three physicians who performed an autopsy on Hart's body this afternoon, testified "burns with asphyxia" to be the cause of the death.

Dr. Carpenter said in his report the autopsy did not reveal any traces of alcohol in the man's stomach. He supplemented this with the statement, however, that the body was embalmed before the autopsy was performed, and in such cases alcohol, unless in large quantities, was hard to detect.

ATLANTA, GA., JULY 18, 1931.

A GOOD WAY TO SETTLE IT.

The inauguration of a recall movement against Mayor Key, whose only offense is that he told the truth in a Paris interview, has started something that cannot be stopped without embarrassment to its promoters.

The failure to get up enough signatures to warrant a recall vote will be an admission of defeat and of the fact that not one-fourth of the voters of Atlanta disagree with the contention of the mayor that prohibition enforcement under existing laws has been a failure.

This, in substance, is the verdict of the Wickersham commission appointed by the president, by authority of congress.

The mayor had the courage to make frank expression of his opinion on the subject when asked for a statement, and for this he has been chastised by those who thought he should have kept his mouth shut. But that is not the mayor's way of doing business. He is noted for the courage of his conviction, and is not, and never has been, a dodger.

The mayor states that he has no objection to a recall vote, and through his office he has extended every facility for the checking of the registration list in the effort of his critics to secure the signatures of one-fourth of the list on a recall petition.

After all, this may be the best way to get a real expression of the city on the contention that has arisen over Mayor Key's frankness in making a truthful answer to an inquiry in Paris.

The mayor's critics say that whether or not what he said was the truth, he should have remained silent.

Those who agree with the mayor's position say that his statement is founded upon fact and that he is to be commended, rather than condemned, for having the courage to tell the truth.

The failure of the effort at recall will be an admission that the mayor's attitude is approved by the city, and that not enough signatures can be obtained to the petition to put the issue to a vote.

On the other hand, if it comes to a vote those who agree with the mayor hold that he will be overwhelmingly sustained.

So there you are! Perhaps the best way to settle the question is by a direct vote which the mayor seems to welcome.

NEEDED LEGAL REFORMS.

The criticism contained in the recent report of the Wickersham commission against certain of the criminal procedure methods in the courts of the United States again focuses public attention upon the need for reforms in our system for the administration of justice.

The report lays at the door of "incompetent, weak and politics-ridden judges" much of the blame for the general dissatisfaction over present legal conditions.

For more than two years a special committee of the American Bar Association has had in hand the planning of a general revision of our laws controlling court procedures, and it is to be hoped that so serious an attack coming from a group of men of as high caliber as those making up the Wickersham commission will have the effect of speeding up the bringing about of these much needed reforms.

Not only is justice being defeated, in many cases through the loopholes furnished by the technicalities of the present system, but serious and inexcusable damage is being done to our business and financial interests as the result of the long drawn out delays which are faced by every case in our civil courts.

There is no more vitally important problem now before the American people than the taking of steps to speed up and make more certain the administration of justice in their courts.

It is a reform that should start with the legal fraternity and it should put its best brains at work on the problem and keep them at it until some practical plan has been devised whereby the courts of America can work as efficiently and speedily as those of England and other countries whose people now regard with amazement the conditions surrounding our administration of justice.

GEORGE AND THE TARIFF.

Senator George points the quickest and surest way to the return of world prosperity in a recent statement urging President Hoover to follow his debt moratorium suggestion by a readjustment of our tariff, thus indicating to the world "our purpose of abandoning the embargo theory of tariff."

Under the flexible provisions of the Smoot-Hawley tariff law the president can revise present tariff rates downward without calling congress into session. The insistency of this provision was largely responsible for the long fight on the measure, which was at no time assured of passage by the senate until it had been incorporated in it.

In view of the president's known objection to the stiffness of many of the rates, it was felt that he would not hesitate to lower them, as authorized in the event it became necessary to do so to avoid either economic depression or retaliation at the hands of other nations.

In his statement Senator George calls attention to the fact that both of these possibilities have become realities, and calls upon the president to summon the tariff commission to conference for the purpose of eradicating the inequalities which are now apparent to both the friends and foes of the Smoot-Hawley act.

Since the president was insistent in his demand for the inclusion of the flexible clause in the bill, unless he makes use of the agency thus given him to smooth out the troubled economic waters, the good-tempered but forceful statement of Senator George is liable to put him in an embarrassing position.

If he does not take some action along the line of tariff revision, it means either a repudiation of his original stand on the Smoot-Hawley law or else that he is afraid to follow his conscience for fear of estranging his supporters among the high tariff barons.

TACKLE THE BIG THORNS.

That there are preposterous and hurtfully prohibitive rates in the Hawley-Smoot tariff act is evident and generally admitted. That they should be corrected is also generally admitted. But there is strong opposition, even in high democratic circles, to any effort by the democrats in the coming session of congress to open the whole tariff structure to reconstruction.

In the first place, it is sure that the democrats cannot pass a tariff bill of their own adaptation. The republicans in one house, or both, will have control of the tariff revision committee and they may be trusted to kill any general tariff revision bill. And even should the democrats and independent republicans pass such a measure, President Hoover may be trusted to veto it.

The obviously wise strategy of the democrats should be to propose a few manifestly needed changes of rates that affect the living costs of all the people and put it up to the republicans to accept them, or to turn them down, and explain to the people their reasons for refusing them. A few such salient cases will make tariff issues enough for the next campaign.

It is too evident to be denied that the business of the nation is not such now as to invite the long marking of time uncertainty that accompanies all cases of general tariff revision. Finance, industry and labor cannot wait with favor the confusion that would accompany a general reconstruction of the tariff and the democrats will be wise not to threaten it, much less attempt it prematurely.

Woodcock could more easily have found out why prohibition is a failure by staying on the mainland instead of going down to Porto Rico.

With Mellon and Stimson sitting in with European cabinets, G. Washington in heaven must be saying to T. Jefferson: "Whatcha know about that?"

As "car of the movies" Will Hays appears to be as functus officio as those ex-cars of Europe.

THE WORLD'S WINDOW

BY PIERRE VAN PAASEN

Superior Women.

The greatest women, judged by feminine standards, are not known to the public, writes Gino Lombroso, daughter of the great Italian psychoanalyst in the Standard. They have no status in the public squares. Everyone can tell you what this or that great man has done, whereas everything accomplished by women equally as great in her own field is vague, anonymous, Woman's greatness is felt—it is not seen nor is it tangible. It is in her absence, even more than her presence, which is realized by men. Woman's superiority consists in her being severe but in her life. Women do not excel in one point, nor in one subject, but everything about them is harmonious and lovely. Their ambition is to win the love of those about them and, in influence lies in the feeling they awaken in others, the keen desire for the best which they unconsciously stimulate.

Authors and Profits.

The fortune left by Arnold Bennett came to $200,000, which is a good deal more than most "littery gents" are able to pass on to their legacies, but not nearly so much as some of the women, and very far below the $500,000 which Bennett had been credited. His gains were considerable, and they were exaggerated by his friends, but he never objected to the extravagant rumors flying about during his life time; for he was a shrewd businessman, and he knew that the more you are supposed to have the more you are likely to receive.

It is suggested that the manuscript of his books, which he carefully preserved, may be worth another $200,000. This again is, I think, an overestimate. Bennett's holograph has never been run after by collectors like that of some other writers, such as Shaw and Kipling. Besides there is a general slump in these war-torn times. The market for manuscripts has fallen heavily since the inflationary days of 1928 and probably will never rise again to the old high levels.

Health Talks

A REAL DOCTOR SAYS SOME THINGS.

He insists that what he says is not for publication, but I insist on publishing it, for I believe it may be a good wholesome lesson to a lot of doctor-crazed folk. I am omitting the doctor's name, so I am sure he cannot object to this publication.

I have been practicing medicine actively for 20 years. I frequently read the questions and answers and commend you for the good advice so often given, but I am sorry that you agreed with Mrs. E. W. in answering her query.

If Mrs. E. W. had the misfortune to be attended by an incompetent, uneducated, and careless doctor before, during or after her confinements she should not condemn the family physician as an instance.

I may say that I have never confined a woman, young or old, rich or poor, without knowing her name and her address, and I have carefully measured her pelvis and ascertained the position 4 to 6 weeks before confinement.

I know there are plenty of other family doctors who are just as conscientious about this and who know and apply the very latest and best methods in obstetric practice, and who have saved many a baby from serious dangers delivery and many a mother from irreparable damage by unwise surgical interference.

I have found many contracted pelvis and have been compelled to induce premature labor in many such cases. In only two cases has Cesarean section been required.

While I am aware of the carelessness of some doctors and some so-called obstetric specialists, I hope you will not permit your readers to get an impression that years of practice necessarily make a doctor a back number. A new York supreme court judge, who you would attend a few meetings of the Academy of Medicine here in Atlanta, and see what a large proportion of the men present range from 50 to 70 years of age—men still active in practice and rather more studious than the younger men of today.

Sincerely,
 That's all there is today. I hope every prospective or potential parent who sees this will cut out the doctor's letter and save it to study carefully and read it to a child before he goes for the advent of the III strategy.

Dr. Randolph C. Sailer, of Teachers College, has been making psychological tests. Among the things that these tests showed, he said, was that beliefs were important; which is to say that individuals who think that life has a serious purpose are usually happy and not addicted to worry. If the question was asked, "What is the answer to all of our troubles?" he got a lot of answers that indicated that a belief was a concomitant of happiness and freedom from worry. But if he asked what the belief was that made for happiness, it would worry the answer into unhappiness.

HOLLYWOOD IN PERSON

BY MOLLIE MERRICK.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., July 17.—Pola Negri made her first royal publicity appearance at the Embassy dinner-dance and recreated the old regime of star-glory.

It's been a long, long time since a queenly star like Pola Negri has been seen. Night-black hair and jade green clothing—jade green slippers and an emerald necklace that was blarney beautiful. With her slim, bony green eyes with a Cleopatra make-up on them, a scarlet slash of mouth and all the disdain, hauteur and remoteness due one of the royal family.

There were 16 in Pola Negri's party. Hollywood's "royal" party. By accident or design? Who knows? But it would be a coincidence indeed if a beauty of such caliber as Pola Negri should happen to invite, quite by accident, seven blondes not particularly beautiful, for the decoration of the eight, sun-gilded, not particularly beautiful, flanked the dinner table.

Hollywood is a place of paradoxes. It is a place where a girl is called "Show me the different stars here tonight, will you? Who's that lovely brunette?"

"Exquisite," and the blonde over there?

Irene Purcell. . . . And so on. You can be the sort of star who can't get from your car to the club entrance without being stopped a dozen times for autographs, and yet have time to attend to sufficient movies to know who the famous of cineland really are.

Victor Baum, very cool and slim and gracious in brilliant blue pajamas, ran nervous hands through her fluffy hair and told me her appreciation of America.

DANES ORDERED TO LONDON MEET

BY C. P. WILLIAMSON.

Hoover Warns U. S. Must Confine Participation to Economic Issues.

WASHINGTON, July 17.—(P)—President Hoover today enlisted the assistance of Ambassador Charles G. Dawes to strengthen still further America's representation at the London conference of ministers.

In an address to the executive branch of the government, Mr. Hoover said that the position that active American participation must be confined to economic problems. This was made known by a transmission of Mr. Hoover and Secretary Stimson, at Paris.

A wide range of attending political questions is expected by the administration to be raised in connection with the formulation of a plan for economic relief for Germany, any suggestions which the American delegates may put forward on such issues will be wholly informal.

Politics Taboo.
 The president's taboo on active American participation in political questions was guaranteed by a letter from a high administration official to the general American public against involvement in the economic work of the conference.

Acting Secretary Castle, of the state department emphasized today that the part of the conference's work in which the United States was interested was that of banking and economics.

He added that Ambassador Dawes would be for Europe July 22 at the Mauretain. The ambassador was one of the principal formulators of the original Dawes plan of reparations which was completed by the Young plan. He has been on leave from his post attending to private affairs in Chicago.

The addition of Dawes' name to the delegation, America will be represented by Secretary Stimson, Secretary Mellon and the ambassador, besides the chief of the American mission, American envoy to Belgium, in London attending a conference of experts called to adjust the unsettled details of the Hoover moratorium plan.

Stimson's Report.
 Secretary Stimson, in one of his telephone calls, told the chief executive without comment of the French position on political guarantees in connection with the economic relief for Germany. Official reports from Paris have outlined three principal French demands. They included a customs guarantee for the projected $500,000,000 of the German military budget for 10 years and maintenance of the status quo in political questions for a similar period.

While there was no official comment on the plan's political aspects, it was broadly hinted today it would be rejected by Secretary Stimson. It involves official American participation.

One role which officials here expect the United States to play in the conversations with the French and Germans to an understanding of questions which have increased in intensity during the past few weeks. Secretary Stimson said that the administration has hinted broadly that it feels a Franco-German understanding is necessary.

Several republican leaders received with gratification the announcement by President Hoover that American participation in the London conference would be limited strictly to economic questions.

Senators Reed, of Pennsylvania, and Bingham, of Connecticut, both expressed their approval of the limitation in the conversations with the French and Germans to an understanding of questions which have increased in intensity during the past few weeks.

Senator Bingham said that the administration has hinted broadly that it feels a Franco-German understanding is necessary.

Letters From a Bald-Headed Dad to a Flapper Daughter

BY ROBERT QUILEN

My dear Louise:

A few years ago—it seems only a matter of days—you and your friends were boisterous little heathens whose good times seemed to consist chiefly in noise-making.

When a dozen of you were huddled in one room or out in the yard, there was no peace or rest for anybody else on the premises.

When you assumed, without parental suggestion, the obligation to serve something or make candy for your guests, the resulting mess required a general overhauling of the kitchen.

And when you took advantage of authority's absence, set the phonograph going and rolled back the rugs for a dance, the nails protruding from your shoes gave the newly-waxed floor a permanent finish resembling that of a smallpox victim.

Under the circumstances, your mother and I didn't encourage you to have mixed company you hesitated to play little parties because you said that you didn't want the house torn down and your nerves wrecked in the process.

Your acceptance of the situation was sweet and praiseworthy—which means that you kicked less than disappointed kids usually do—but you got the wrong idea.

You thought the ban on home-made whoopee was permanent. And I didn't know how you felt about it until last night, when you said that you were going to have a party and that your mother and me had to go.

I suspect that all kids feel that way. I did at your age. It's a result of everlasting "don'ts."

But the prohibitions aren't necessary now, for you are past the young-cyclone period; and I want you to understand that our home is not really your home, but that its chief business from now on is to serve as a setting for your life.

It has always been my ambition for your home to be the headquarters and gathering place for all of the well-bred youngsters of the community.

I want them all to feel as Jack did the year before he died. Do you remember how he would drop in at night, make himself comfortable and say "Got anything to eat, Liza? I don't go home to supper and I'm famished."

I know that youngsters of your age must be together to be happy. And I want you to provide the meeting place. I built that new glassed-in room especially for your playhouse. Only remember that everything is a bore if you overdo it.

German Leaders Carry Hopes Of Nation on Trip to Paris

BERLIN, July 17.—(P)—Chancellor Heinrich Brüning and Foreign Minister Julius Curtius left Berlin tonight for Paris, followed by the fervent hopes of millions of their countrymen that in their meeting tomorrow with the statesmen of France they will lay the foundation for co-operation between France and Germany and will help the reich out of her economic crisis.

The last words of Herr Brüning as he boarded the Nord express shortly before 10 p. m. were an expression of hope that the outcome of the journey would be a friendly collaboration and visible proof of international solidarity.

Although he placed much emphasis on such a principle, the chancellor, the chancelor did not disguise that Germany badly needs the international loan his journey was designed to facilitate.

There was an almost unanimous feeling in Germany that much more was at stake than the $500,000,000 loan which the reich is seeking in the way of international financial assistance—to help her through the economic crisis. Although much of Germany's local business is in a Paris negotiations and on the discussions scheduled to be held later in London, the communists and the right radicals dissented.

nations are proceeding, but a serious hitch threatens the plans for that conference.

Reports from Paris indicate the French are unwilling to come before Germany's creditors until the terms which are to be presented when Chancellor Brüning and Foreign Minister Curtius get there tomorrow. The absence of French representatives would seriously hamper the work of such a conference although all the other nations invited, including the United States, Germany, Italy, Belgium and Japan, have accepted.

It is emphasized that the French have no intention of staging the Monday meeting so that what the Berlin national press has called a "second Versailles" would be imposed upon Germany.

Carnesville Youth Elected State Future Farmers Head

Shop Contest Prizes Are Awarded at Concluding Session of Conference Held in Athens.

Thomas Dixon "Dick" Brown, of Carnesville High school, son of Mr. and Mrs. T. D. Brown, tonight placed his best in governing the affairs of the organization during the next year, in his inaugural address.

Other officers selected, who also made short talks, were Willie McGee, of Lanier High school, Macon, first vice president; Robert Fulcher, Waynesboro, second vice president; Harlin Winkle, Gore, third vice president; Cecil Shadburn, Macon, secretary; Fulton Morey, Sale City, treasurer, and M. D. Mobley, assistant supervisor of agricultural education in Georgia, re-elected state adviser.

The president and three vice presidents will serve as advisory chairmen. The grand individual prize in the shop contest was won by Fred Clarkson, of Barnesville, who was presented with a $25 rifle for his efforts.

The shop contest was divided into four parts, and those winning in these special parts were as follows: Mixing concrete, Robert Fulcher, Waynesboro; rubber cutting, George Duke, Leslie; farm forging, George Duke, Leslie; machinery adjustment, Fred Clarkson, Barnesville.

Fascist Regime Is Defended As Salvation of Italians

Member Raps Characterization of Nation as 'People Bound to Start War' Abroad.

ATHENS, Ga., July 17.—Characterization of the Italians as "a people bound to start war," was called "nonsense" by Signor Beniamino De Ritis, member of the fascist party, at the University of Georgia institute of public affairs here tonight.

Signor De Ritis is head of the information service of the Italian American Society, of which Marshall Field, president, and whose executive committee include Otto H. Kahn, George F. Baker Jr., Thomas W. Lamont, A. H. Giannini and others.

"The tragedy of Italy's life is in the disproportion between what she has and what she needs," he declared. "The fascist regime aims to effect a balance which will enable her people to live in freedom and happiness," Signor De Ritis said.

"Italy has been seeking its economic expansion, not by force or war, but by international agreements and a peaceful promotion of economic relations with other countries," Signor De Ritis asserted.

Describing the contribution of fascism to the Italian people, Signor De Ritis said that "fascism means pioneering in human, social and ethical fields. The pioneering spirit manifests itself in a way which is inevitably stern and uncompromising, and requires action and sentiment. It does not indulge in theories and speculations."

"Italy," he said, "found the post-war period the darkest it passed through after the unification of the nation. The immense disappointment of the peace conference, where Italy, notwithstanding her heavy sacrifices, was treated like a poor relation, gave way to subversive forces and the country was on the verge of bolshevism."

and bankruptcy. Italy instinctively felt the necessity of creating a new order when she gave birth to fascism. The alternative was civil suicide."

"Fascism means," its defender declared, "first of all a strong appeal to all vital forces of the country. The real wealth of Italy is manpower, and in order to manage this greatest of all raw materials, fascism established a new form of state which is collected, not as aggregate of groups and individuals, but as spiritual entity in which the individual is not eliminated but subordinated to society. Fascism is much more ethical, social and economic than political."

"Fascism is a mass movement which after ten years of trying difficulties and experience has strongly entrenched itself with the will power of the alert enterprising new generations. Youth is on the top in Italy and the future belongs to youth."

Signor De Ritis expressed the opinion that the successor to Mussolini will come from the fascist youth who have been brought up in the electrifying atmosphere of Mussolini's leadership.

Stribling Praised for Courageous Battle Against Schmeling; 'Road' or Knoxville To Get Mobile's Games, Martin Indicates

W. L. STRIBLING PRAISED HIGHLY BY MACON FANS

Georgian Given Big Hand and Presents by Admirers.

MACON, Ga., July 17.—(AP)—Nearly 200 friends of Young Stribling gathered round a banquet table to honor and present the Macdonald fighter.

Dr. Holmes Mason, acting as toastmaster, and Ellsworth Hall, who gave the principal talk of the evening, lauded the young Georgian for his fine and courageous contest with Max Schmeling two weeks ago in Cleveland. Congressman Rutherford also made a short speech.

Stribling was given a tremendous ovation when he arose and thanked the gathering for their friendship even though he lost. W. L. repeated his statement of last night in regard to Schmeling's statement that he (Stribling) thumbed his nose.

GREAT TRIBUTE.
"I can't say that I had rather be welcomed as a loser than as a winner, but this is the most marvelous tribute I ever received," W. L. told his fellow citizens.

"It was a good fight and a clean fight; Schmeling is one of the squarest shooters I ever fought, but when he says that I stuck my thumb in his eye, I will say in return that the thumb was accompanied by four fingers laced in a boxing glove. I've had the same kind of thumbs stuck into my eyes several times during my 208 fights."

MUCH APPLAUSE.
Stribling was greeted with applause at almost every utterance, and frequently was interrupted with cries of "Atta boy, Stribling." The fighter spoke for approximately 10 minutes as a culmination to a banquet in which he was praised by local and state celebrities and showered with gifts that included flowers, a silver set, a giant cake and other presents.

"I am glad that the fight is over and awfully sorry that I could not speak as a champion, but I am at least free to do what I please. I can go to the theater, now, watch the pictures of the fight and see what happened after the eleventh round," Stribling concluded.

The entire Stribling family was present at the banquet. "Pa" Stribling made a brief speech in which he declared that never in prize fight history had a loser received such a welcome as his son received tonight.

Other speakers at the evening included J. Ellsworth Hall, prominent local attorney, and Congressman Sam Rutherford. Dr. R. K. Holmes Mason acted as toastmaster.

Dempsey Seeking Schmeling for Bout

RENO, Nev., July 17.—(AP)—Jack Dempsey, who brought boxing into big money as a fighter, said he would like to fight Max Schmeling for the world heavyweight title, and now is back as a promoter, hopes to stage a world championship heavyweight match here next summer, with Max Schmeling against the most likely contender.

Dempsey made this announcement last night after he talked over plans with Sammy Goldman, manager of Tony Canzoneri, for a bout here Labor Day.

"I will put forth every effort," he said, "to bring Max Schmeling here in a world heavyweight championship bout with the foremost contender for the title during the early part of next summer."

The promoter pointed out that he had "an arena already built that can be enlarged to meet any requirements."

Dempsey and Goldman debated possibilities of bringing together Canzoneri and Kid Chocolate, junior lightweight champion, in the Labor Day fight. Three titles, junior lightweight, lightweight and welterweight, would be at stake.

Edith Quier Is Upset By Mrs. Federman

EASTERN POINT, Conn., July 17.—(AP)—Mrs. L. C. Federman, of Shelton, Conn., today defeated Edith Quier, of Reading, Pa., defending champion, by a margin of 2 and in the final match of the Griswold cup golf tournament at the Shennecossett Country Club.

Miss Quier had two legs in the cup and a victory today would have given her permanent possession.

W. L. STRIBLING.
It is too bad about some laws; the laws prohibiting prize-fight pictures for one thing; the Stribling-Schmeling fight, to be specific.

At the ringside on the night of July 3, it was obvious that Stribling was making a great fight, perhaps the best one of his career. Only a few of those there, rabid anti-Stribling men, denied him that.

Had the fight been stopped after ten rounds the Georgian would have won the decision. From the tenth on he was losing.

Sitting there that night, with Stribling's face a welter of blood; watching the steered faces of his family at his corner taking the blows as game as the boy himself; it seemed that in the final three rounds Stribling was making an heroic effort. At the time I thought the idea might have been born of sentiment.

The film showed, however, that Stribling was still trying for the knockout he had hoped for; that he was holding on in the last four rounds until he got a chance to swing.

And when his body went down in the fifteenth, an inert mass, the packed theater held its collective breath. There was an intake of breath as the inert mass stirred, as the body raised itself to one knee.

And there was a great and mighty cheer when Stribling stumbled up to his feet to meet the end.

And so I think it is a pity that the fight films can't be shown throughout all Georgia. They show a game fighter fighting a game fight. And they show up the radio announcers who, the folks say, kept giving it to Max all the way.

CONNIE MACK'S INVINCIBLES.

There is no telling with which end the Philadelphia Athletics, at present running away with the American league race, are going to hit an opponent.

Robert Moses Grove won his nineteenth game of the year Friday, beating Detroit 6 to 3. And did he get his help from Bishop, Haas, Cochrane et al.?

He did not. The first five men in the Athletic batting order, Bishop, Haas, Cochrane, Simmons and Fox, managed to get together a total of two base hits.

The "light end" of the list, Miller, Dykes, Boley and Grove himself, turned in eight base hits.

All of which proves that there is no such animal as a light end of the list in the Philadelphia Athletic batting order.

AND RIGHT BACK DOWN AGAIN.
It would be interesting to observe the Atlanta Crackers against either Birmingham or Memphis when the Atlanta club was clicking.

On paper the Crackers stand up as one of the better clubs. Yet their fielding has been consistently bad; the pitchers have not been going when there was hitting; the batters have let good pitching go unrewarded.

The Crackers remind one of that old ballad about the man who walked right in, turned around and walked right out again.

Or about the king who marched his troops up the hill and then marched them down again.

Once, not so long ago, they were in second place. Apparently terrified at the rare atmosphere near the pinnacle, they tumbled down. Thursday night saw them with an opportunity to slip into third place, just a few points out of second.

Only to break open wide at the seams. Injuries, inconsistency and incompetence have beset the Crackers. It would be interesting to see them click just once.

"A DIRTY IRIS TRICK."
Max Schmeling's announced refusal to go ahead with the Carnera fight in September because of an eye injury, has been dubbed "A dirty iris trick" by one of the boys up east.

One wonders if Joe Jacobs didn't have his tongue in his cheek as well as his cigar, when he signed the contract for the fight.

They do not come any foxier than Yussel Jacobs, the manager of Max Schmeling.

Some of the cheering for the German champion seems to have died down. If Jack Sharkey should come through with a great victory over Mickey Walker he would re-establish himself, even though he is no more popular than Max.

Still, the public forgets overnight. I still think that if W. L. Stribling had won from Schmeling he would have been the first really popular champion since Dempsey.

FINE PITCHING BY MORRISON BEATS MOBILE

"Jughandle" Holds Marines as Crackers Win Fourth Game, 7-1.

By Ralph McGill.

"Jughandle" John Morrison turned in a pitching masterpiece Friday night and his mates hit that baseball for him. The combination of pitching and hitting defeated Mobile 7 to 1. He did it every time.

Sixteen hits rattled off Cracker bats while the Mobile Marines were eking out four. Simon Rosenthal, the slugging fool of Thursday night, was subdued until the eighth when he broke out with a triple to score Pinch-Hitter Moore, who had walked. That was the lone Marine tally.

Jughandle John Morrison pitched a real ball game. In the sixth and eighth he struck out McDaniel, one of the league's good hitters, with men in scoring positions. With a man on third each time, as a matter of fact.

And the Marines did not go out on strikes called by the umpire. They went out swinging and missing those jughandle curves.

BATTLE HARDER.
The poor Marines, having read in the papers that their club management was in financial distress again, battled harder than ever. But to no avail. In the first place the Marines are going along with just five pitchers. The same pitchers who worked Thursday night appeared again Friday evening.

Big Jim Owens, who had the Crackers' stopped Thursday, was nicked for a run in each of the first three innings. Mobile scored one in the eighth, a pinch-hitter appearing for Owens.

The Crackers' cousin, Benny Bass, replaced Owens for Mobile at the start of the Crackers' half of the eighth and the fun began.

GAME PUT ON ICE.
The game was greeted with a salvo of five hits which were turned into four runs by the Crackers to put the old game on ice. Or what is your favorite electric refrigerator?

Roy Carlyle was the hitting maestro of the evening. He was up there seeking four times and each time he got his hits, four good, clean ones. He drove in two runs.

The Crackers got one in the first when Red Barnes opened with a double. Sheehan sacrificed him to third. He stayed there until Roy Carlyle boomed one to right for a double to score him.

The same combination worked in the second. An error by Williams, and hits by Chapman and O'Connell got the Crackers a second run. There weren't two hits and one run in the third, Tait tripling and scoring on Carlyle's single.

Club Looks Good.
The four runs in the eighth were just fast facts that Benny Bass gave up. It wasn't difficult work.

The Crackers looked great winning as they looked bad losing Thursday. Jack Sheehan made a great stop and throw in the sixth to halt Rosenthal. And in the ninth Poco Tait went back into DeKalb county to catch one of his boys.

The Crackers played this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Hey, you, listen. At 2:30 THIS AFTERNOON. Not tonight. He'll pitch.

After this afternoon's game the club goes on a road trip. It may find them crowding into third place. So turn out for the boys. At 2:30 THIS AFTERNOON.

FORT POLOISTS TAKE JOURNEY

Fort McPherson's polo team will leave this morning for Fort Oglethorpe where it will play the sixth cavalry four Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock in what promises to be a close and exciting game.

The horses shipped up the state to Fort Oglethorpe yesterday. Captain Albert G. Wing, Fort McPherson star who is now at Fort Clinch, will lead the Alabama post today and join his teammates on the scene of the contest. He will play in No. 1 position.

The other Fort McPherson players making the trip are Lieutenant McNair, Lieutenant Biddle, Lieutenant Baker, Mr. Shubert, Captain Child and Lieutenant Hall. The players and their families will be the guests of Fort Oglethorpe over the week-end.

Harry Ready for Defense of Title

Harry Gault, Atlanta's city tennis champion, is ready to start the defense of his crown in the tournament opening this afternoon on the Georgia Tech courts at the corner of Techwood drive and Third street. Harry has brought his game to a midsummer peak, and is primed to face the fast field which will assemble. He is favored to retain his laurels, but will be extended by his opponents. The city's best have turned out for the tourney, which promises to be one of the fastest in local history.

GOLFERS FACE FULL SCHEDULE

Many Tourneys Will Occupy Local Group Over Week-End.

Another busy week-end faces Atlanta golfers as three tournaments start and play continues in a number of other events.

Capital City golfers will complete qualifying rounds in the annual governing board trophy tournament. Charlie Black Jr. is leading at present with a 74. Match play in the tournament will start Sunday afternoon. The entrants will be given over to each round of play.

Final qualifying rounds in the annual club championship tournament for Druid Hills members will be played this afternoon. Jimmy Wilson's 78, scored Thursday, is low among the early qualifiers, but with some of the club's best golfers having yet to qualify, the mark is not likely to stand through the day.

Julius Hughes, the defending champion, will face plenty of competition next week when match play gets under way.

Registrations for the Trammell Scott tournament, being played on the John A. White course, will close at noon today at Scott's store on North Broad street. More than 150 golfers already have registered and approximately 100 of that number have turned in their cards. Today and Sunday will be given over to final qualifying play, with matches scheduled to start Monday afternoon.

One week will be allowed for each round of play. The entrants will be grouped into divisions of 32 each. Kid Brown's 69, which set a new course record Thursday, is low among the qualifying scores turned in thus far.

The match for the second flight title of the Latham and Atkinson trophy tournament, between J. A. Dodd and E. B. Zachary, is slated to be played today on the No. 1 course at East Lake.

Other East Lake players will complete their practice rounds in preparation for the president's cup tourney, which starts next Wednesday afternoon.

Max Pittard and Alva (Gost) Cochran are scheduled to meet on the West End course during the week-end in the finals of the club handicap tournament.

Several matches remain unplayed on the Ansley Park course in the semi-finals and finals of the president's trophy tournament. They were postponed from last week, due to the Georgia state tourney at Sea Island Beach.

In addition to the club championship qualifying rounds, Harry Stephens has arranged a blind par handicap tourney for Druid Hills players this afternoon.

DOUGLAS ASKS OWNERS TO AID WITH PROBLEM

Expects 'Things To Happen'; Montgomery May Ask for Club.

By Ralph McGill.

Mobile's remaining home baseball games will be thrown on the road or transferred to some other city, probably Knoxville, Tenn., it was indicated Friday in advices from the Southern league office at Memphis.

John D. Martin, president of the league, said in a telephonic interview Friday afternoon that he was unable to say what would be done because he had not yet gone into all the details.

It was learned, however, that the call for a meeting of the directors to alleviate the Mobile situation came as a distinct surprise to Martin and the other directors. President Martin, while a visitor in Atlanta Tuesday, together with Byrd Douglas, owner of the Mobile club, said that Mobile was a fixture.

PAYMENT "OUT."
Reports Friday had it that a sum of money, due the Mobile club this week, was not forthcoming, thus necessitating the call for the directors.

"The request for the call comes as a great surprise to me," said President Martin. "I had no idea that any such move was contemplated as I had been informed that the new owners were in there to stay."

"I cannot make any statement regarding a transfer of Mobile's games to the road or to another city, because I do not know what will be done by the directors."

ACTION NEEDED.
Southern league directors should, if the Mobile finances are in poor condition, vote to transfer the games to Knoxville rather than put the club on the road for the remainder of the season.

Mobile, if lack of support at the gate is the cause of the distress signal, has shown conclusively that it will not support a baseball club.

Knoxville is eager to try. Knoxville has built a ball park and is ready to support a team with a cash guarantee. Montgomery would be a better city so far as travel is concerned, and probably so far as cash conditions are concerned. But Montgomery has taken no initiative in the matter, Knoxville has.

MISFORTUNES THICK.
Byrd Douglas is an excellent baseball man. He ran into quite a lot of misfortune at Mobile. The citizens of Mobile take sestas or go fishing in the afternoon.

Night baseball might have saved Douglas. Yet engineers found that the huge Mobile park could not be lighted without the expenditure of huge sums of money.

The club could never get up in the race and the Mobile fans choose to remain at home.

In the meantime, of course, some means may be found to keep the club in Mobile. It would seem, however, that Mobile has plenty shown that baseball is not of interest to the city at large.

The Southern association should move now to make the league absolutely stable.

Meeting Requested To Solve Problem.
MOBILE, Ala., July 17.—(AP)—A meeting of Southern league directors was asked by President Byrd Douglas of the Mobile club, to seek financial assistance in the operation of the club and to request the transfer of Mobile's remaining home games to the road. Douglas stated that he had been in conversation with the Mobile Register tonight.

Douglas declared that the poor showing of the team, with resultant lack of interest by the fans, had brought about a financial situation in the affairs of the club that he thought should be placed before the league directors.

Douglas added that his plans did not contemplate the transfer of the Mobile club to the Southern Association, said tonight that he contemplated "certain changes" in the team.

He declined to amplify the statement, however, adding only that "changes" would be made until after the meeting Monday, anyway."

Montgomery May Seek Games.
MONTGOMERY, Ala., July 17.—(AP)—The Montgomery Advertiser will say tomorrow that this city probably

'Shoeless' Joe Plays Again, Gets 2 Hits

SAVANNAH, July 17.—(AP)—Old "Shoeless" Joe Jackson, whose professional baseball career ended after the world series scandal of 1919, came back to bat here yesterday and batted out two hits.

Jackson, who runs a pressing club here, played in the outfield for one of the city league teams. His box score lineup showed him batting 1-0-00 with two hits, including a double, out of two times at bat, and a perfect fielding record.

It was with "Black Betsy," the 26-year-old hickory bludgeon which Jackson used all during his professional minor and major league career, that "Shoeless" smacked out his safe singles.

The call of the game is close for Joe now and he is considering an offer to become player-manager of a semi-pro baseball team here.

"Black Betsy" has a history of its own. An admirer gave the bat to Jackson while Joe was playing sandlot baseball in Greenville, S. C. Joe liked the bat so well that he carried it along with him and used it at intervals all through his baseball life.

Wild Adventure Found In Chess Tournament

Game Mysterious, Fascinating, Cloaks Brilliance Not Apparent on Surface.

By Max Hall.

A chess tournament is a marvelous thing. Consider the 11th annual southeastern chess meet concluded yesterday at the Biltmore hotel here.

The contestants ranged in age from 15 to 83. The 83-year-old was D. Neuman, of Albany. The 15-year-old was Ernest Hadaris, of Macon.

And young Hadaris won the championship in his class, which was Class B. Gray-haired, experienced players fell before him right and left. Not only that, but Mario Hernandez, a 16-year-old boy from Tampa, won the championship in Class C.

There were two blind men in the tournament. And they played well. They were both Atlanta men, J. J. Childs and Paul Donohoe.

There was one lady in the meet, Mrs. John Harrison, of Macon. She finished in fifth place in Class C, a creditable showing.

She claims jokingly that she "is the only woman in the world with the patience to play in a chess tournament."

There were two father-and-son combinations playing in the tournament and one mother-and-son combination.

Neuman, who finished in fifth place in Class C, made a great showing. Nestor was runner-up in Class A.

At Macon, W. N. Woodbury, who won the championship, lost to Robert Williams and Robert Williams Jr., of Macon, did well. Mrs. Harrison and her son, John Harrison, finished second in Class C. formed the mother-and-son twosome.

Chess is a sort of awesome thing to contemplate. It has an air of mystery about it. No one knows just where it came from, nor how old it is. It has been definitely traced back as far as the fifth century, and it may have originated in Persia or Arabia or China. No one knows.

Yet, despite its wondrous age and the tradition surrounding it, the grand old game goes merrily on, and seems to actually be more popular all the time. There are thousands of chess clubs in this nation alone. A great many books have been written and are being written about it.

Boys not yet in their teens, old men with white beards, ladies, blind men, all of them play the game and love it. It has a powerful fascination. Not only does it compel the attention of the experts who play it, but it has the power of imparting some of its strange enchantment to the rank outsider.

CONFLICT AND STRATEGY. For example, this tournament just concluded here in Atlanta. One who knows nothing of chess stands in the long room, and he senses the latent excitement, the tension in the air; under the cloak of outward tranquillity, he feels the conflict and strategy of a great battle.

A chess match is a battle, a battle of the mind. As such it is even more brilliant, it is more daring, thrusts, courageous charges, mighty conflict. Adventures in the mind, say those who know, are the only real adventures in life.

So a person with a little imagination sees more in two tables with chessmen than sitting opposite one another. There is more to it than men smoking pipes, gazing fixedly at the board till it seems their eyes have been turned to stone.

Underneath it all there is a wild, exciting adventure. You don't believe it? Learn to play chess.

BOULEVARD WOMAN'S CLUB PLANS STUDY PROGRAM

Mrs. R. H. Wolfe Announces Standing Committee Leaders

Tentative plans for activities of the Boulevard Park Woman's Club for the club year were outlined by Mrs. Raymond H. Wolfe, newly installed president of the club, at a recent meeting held at the home of Mrs. Lee F. Dreyfus, on Elmwood drive. Other than the usual civic, social, charitable and educational activities of the club a new feature has been planned. Under the leadership of Mrs. W. O. Gaffney, chairman of education, a study group will be formed, giving members interested in cultural and educational subjects a new department of interest. The program of study will include travel, literature, music, art and the drama, and detailed information relative to study and the subjects on the program for the fall months will be given by Mrs. Gaffney and her committee at the meeting of the club in September.

Gardens Featured.

Beautiful rear gardens, always of interest to members of the Boulevard Park Woman's Club, will be especially featured under the direction of Mrs. M. L. Clifton, who has been appointed chairman of garden. Residents of Boulevard Park are eligible for membership and invited to attend the meetings.

Standing Committees.

Standing committee chairmen appointed are: Membership, Mrs. Leaver Richardson; house, Mrs. G. P. Sasser; hospitality, Mrs. H. A. Agriola; welfare, Mrs. George W. Tamm; education, Mrs. W. O. Gaffney; finance, Mrs. Clarke Donaldson; and under the department of civics, health and sanitation, under the direction of Mrs. A. L. Myers; gardens, Mrs. M. L. Clifton; citizenship, Mrs. W. L. Waldman. Mrs. J. C. Gore will also serve on citizenship committee. Complete personnel of committees will be announced later.

Chairmen to serve on special committees are: Scrapbook, Miss Helen Swann; needlework guild, Mrs. E. D. Thomas; co-operative chairman for Atlanta Federation, Mrs. Lee F. Dreyfus; Hillside Cottage, chairman to be announced later, and Mrs. Gus

Berman will serve as vice chairman.

Pending more extensive plans, residents of Boulevard Park are requested to keep dead and dying trees removed from both lawns and tree beds. In order to keep streets as clean and attractive as possible request is also made that pruning and grass clippings not be placed on the streets, tree beds or curbs except late in the afternoon of the day on which such things are collected by the sanitary department. At present the days are Tuesdays and Fridays. Grass clippings placed in cans or in baskets and kept off the streets on other days will prevent the continued untidy appearance frequently found on some streets.

Forethought in this direction will keep Boulevard Park clean. Grass really should not be placed on the streets, and grass clipping properly used for fertilizer is economical and keeps little heaps of grass from streets, which are otherwise strewn over the entire roadway by every passing automobile and by the wind. For information regarding disposal, call Mrs. A. L. Myers, chairman of sanitation and health.

Officers of the club are: President, Mrs. Raymond H. Wolfe; first vice president, Mrs. W. H. Smith; second vice president, Mrs. H. A. Agriola; recording secretary, Mrs. H. M. Williams; corresponding secretary, Mrs. J. N. Black; treasurer, Mrs. H. T. Cox; auditor, Mrs. A. L. Myers.

Civitan Club Members Honored At Supper at Camp Civitania

Honor guests at Camp Civitania yesterday were members of the Civitan Club of Atlanta, to whom the Girl Scouts are indebted for the camp property and beautiful swimming pool. Herbert Porter, chairman of the Girl Scout committee of Camp Civitania, was official host to more than 50 members of the club visiting the camp. Girl Scouts were hostesses to the club on an inspection tour of the camp in the early afternoon. Following the swim period for swimmers a number of Civitans enjoyed for the first time a dip in the clear waters of the pool. Buffet supper was served in Thompson lodge. An original program by the camp units, Gypsies, Pirates, Indians and Merrydons, followed supper. The dramatization of the story of the Gypsies, Gitanas, being crowned; an Indian dance by Millie Wagner; the pantomime of the wedding of Maid Marion and Robin Hood; a pirate boat scene brought to a close an enjoyable program.

Miss Catherine Park, field representative of the national Girl Scout staff, was at Camp Civitania Friday and Saturday for training of staff and campers. Miss Park came to Civitania from national training camp, Edith Macy, in New York. A unique ceremony of the burning of a wren's nest that has flown for many years at Civitania will take place Thursday afternoon. John M. Miller has presented the camp with a new emblem of "Old Glory". Sunday afternoon a beautiful tree-planting ceremony was participated in by staff and campers following a week's program and campaign for the election of a camp tree. In the amphitheater a white pine was planted with a representative from each camp unit, with appropriate music and poems.

Culbertson on Contract

BY ELY CULBERTSON,
World's Champion Player and Greatest Card Analyst

Avoid Tenace Openings

There is no principle of the Modern Theory of Leads less generally understood than the principle governing waiting leads against a no-trump declaration. For years a tradition handed down from the days of Whist has been accepted by Bridge players so generally that it has become an axiom in the game. "Always lead fourth best of your longest and strongest suit." Like many other "rules" of the game, it is entirely incorrect. "Always" is a word to be used with extreme caution, as is its antithesis "never." These two words have cost Bridge players more losses at the table than can easily be computed.

If you have strong suits to lead, which can be established quickly, and your hand contains a reentry to permit you to make the long cards of that suit, then the direct frontal attack is to be preferred. The only question then involved is whether the number of tricks you can establish is sufficient to defeat the contract. If it is and you can get in to make them, then the direct frontal attack is to be preferred. The only question then involved is whether the number of tricks you can establish is sufficient to defeat the contract. If it is and you can get in to make them, then the direct frontal attack is to be preferred.

A waiting lead is the lead of a worthless short suit and its purpose is to surrender the lead and permit the cards in tense situation to be led up to rather than away from. The hand below, recently played in a Duplicate Contract tournament, aptly illustrates the value of the waiting lead.

Both sides vulnerable

The bidding:

South Pass West North East
 1NT(2) Pass 2NT(3) Pass
 3NT(4) Pass Pass Pass

1-North is simply strong for his bid of one spade, which is to be preferred to a bid of no-trump, as it is calculated better to reveal the strength and weakness of the other hands around the table.

2-South, holding 2 honor-tricks, takes out with one no-trump rather than two hearts because the heart suit is of only four cards in length and partner will ordinarily assume a suit of five cards for a bid of two under these conditions.

3-North's hand is of balanced distribution and his partner's bid has assured him that the combined hands total at least 5 honor-tricks. He, therefore, bids 3NT, which is South has more than 1-2 honor-trick, which was not accounted for by his bid of one no-trump. Encouraged by North's Third Hand Opening and later Raise, South now bids for game.

The Play.

The old school would have dictated the opening of the heart four, the fourth best card of West's longest and strongest suit. This lead would be the equivalent of presenting game to South as it makes it certain that South will win at least 2 heart tricks. As the cards lie, 3 spade tricks are assured, as well as 2 clubs and 2 diamonds. If South is permitted to develop the hand according to his own mind, West, however, has a much better lead and that is the lead of the diamond 8, a wait lead which preserves his tenace position in both hearts and clubs until such time as these suits are led by other players. In the actual game, West selected this card as his Opening. The Declarer played a low card from the Dummy and East won with the diamond Knave. East now would have been playing the Declarer's game-to-have returned his partner's Opening lead as he can easily see from the cards in his own hand and those in sight in the Dummy that West had chosen his lead because his holdings in other suits were such that a lead toward his strength would be more beneficial than a lead away from it. Aided by the information of the waiting lead and the entire lack of strength in the heart suit shown in the Dummy, East now led the heart 9 and the defeat of this contract was assured.

PARKER DECLINES CONGRESS RACE

Homer C. Parker, former adjutant general of Georgia, Friday issued a statement declaring he will not be a candidate for congress from the first district, but that he probably will offer again for state comptroller general, for which office he was defeated by W. B. Harrison.

Mr. Parker said it had been said in the press that he was mentioned as a possible successor to the late Charles G. Edwards in congress. He is steadfast in the opinion that Georgians nominated him for comptroller general in the 1926 primary, and believes in another opportunity to vote for him for comptroller general; hence he will not be a congressional candidate, Mr. Parker said.

Your newest creation by Chanel or Vionnet might look prettier than a sports suit—but you wouldn't think of wearing it on the golf course. It would be neither comfortable nor sensible—and the smart woman of 1931 insists on both.

It is not in dress alone that smart women are applying this rule of common sense. Just hundreds and hundreds of Atlanta women are applying it to their personal transportation.

Back in the uncrowded days when you could drive easily up in front of a store and park your car without trouble or competition, it was smart to shop by automobile.

Today, however, with about 60,000 automobiles in Fulton county and space down town to park only 2,665 of them; with crowded streets and traffic jams; non-parking laws, policemen and blue tickets; dented fenders and nervous breakdowns—an automobile on a shopping tour has changed from a pleasure into an annoyance.

Smart women, seeking the comfortable, safe, quick and thrifty way of shopping, have solved the problem.

They ride the street cars!

They go downtown and return, relaxed, in comfort, protected from traffic bothers, free from parking worries.

To all these blessings, add the boon of economy and you easily understand why it's smart to shop by street car.

Try a sample ride; you'll quite likely meet your neighbors and friends on the street car.

INSTALLMENT VII.

As she walked down the tree avenue toward Oakleigh, Sally thought casually that the boy had a handsome face and, really, very good manners. She rather liked him, as a Miss Sally Rutherford might regard a milk truck driver. His bright, wavy hair, his young, resolute face with its fine features and unbelievably blue eyes, held one's attention. The chance meeting with a stranger so young, smiling, friendly, made the sad day brighter.

"So this," reflected the truck driver on his way to Winstead, "is Sally Rutherford! N-no, she hasn't changed much. She's still the pretty child on horseback, proud as Lucifer, poor kid; but she's lovely and fine and gallant, and she's in deep waters, and if I can help her in any way without being intrusive I'll do so." He stopped with some astonishment to regard the fact that he most intensely wished to be of service to her. In fact, that he wished it more intensely than he had ever wished anything in his life; more yet, he thought that if he wasn't to be allowed to do so he would be more or less failing in life! This so troubled him that he brought the truck to a standstill just outside Winstead gates and sat thinking deeply.

"Now, we don't want Oakleigh, we don't need Oakleigh, we simply won't have Oakleigh," he reflected. "And that girl does, and must. She shall. So I shall have to take a hand in the game, Sally Rutherford, and here's where you begin to notice the milkman, my dear." For the first time in his life young Mr. Winstead's mind dwelt persistently on a particular girl. "Miss Sally Rutherford, you may not know it yet, or even dream it, but I strongly suspect that your future husband and my future wife met each other this afternoon," thought Sam Winstead.

After scrubbed, moss whitewashed, Sally painted and varnished Oakleigh for necessary furnishings. A gay old gingham laid aside in the attic was ripped, washed and ironed, and transformed into curtains. Discarded small tables were salvaged and painted in gay colors to contrast with the dark floor.

Sally was giving a small table a coat of Chinese red when a car stopped outside and a moment later young Mr. Forman stood in the open doorway.

"Hello! It begins to look right pretty here. What are you doing?" "Painting a table," said Sally briefly. He was taller than she had thought—a big athletic fellow—and even better looking than he had seemed in the truck.

"What's the table for?" "Serving."

"Serving what?" "O, coffee, tea, hot biscuits, bread, sliced ham, cake, pie. Whatever I can get to serve. But mostly, she hesitated for a fraction of a second, then her head went up, "but mostly we hope to serve . . . hot dogs."

"Hot dogs!" said he, as one might say "Whoopie!" "Good news! I crave hot dogs myself when I'm going and coming. I mayn't be particularly particular about other things, but I'm real penicillate about my hot dogs. They've got to be just so. Do you know how to make really good ones?"

"A girl in my class used to make them. With ketchup, and sauerkraut, and mustard. They were really nice," said Sally.

"A man in my class eats 'em," said the milkman gravely. "That's why I have to be so particular. A fine hot dog is a work of art, you know, you'll want a counter to stand behind and lean your elbows on if you're going to serve the right sort of hot dogs."

"I have no counter," she deplored. "That would call for a carpenter."

"I'll make you a counter, miss—didn't I tell you I was sort of—uh—handyman? Have you any boards, or shall I bring some with me? I've got some nice boards I don't need right now."

Sally flushed.

"My, you do hate like all getout to let people do neighborly things for you, don't you?" Sam looked at her shrewdly. "I suppose you can't help being like that, you being Miss Rutherford, and all. You're a pretty smart girl in some ways—but you take it from me, you're a pretty mistaken girl—in some ways, too."

Sally Rutherford could hardly believe her ears. She straightened up and stood looking at him. It was such a look as had at times put other brash youths in their places; it had absolutely no effect on the milkman.

"My, you've got the brownest eyes," he exclaimed suddenly, as one who has just made a thrilling discovery. "I never thought of it before, but I do like brown eyes—I like 'em best of all." His own, astonishingly blue, beamed with frank admiration.

"You don't not to talk to me like that, please." This time there was more than an edge to her voice. Rutherford pride looked nakedly out of the brown eyes, informed every feature of the young face.

"No? But you have got brown eyes, haven't you? Very brown, aren't they?" said he. "All right, Miss Rutherford, when do you want me to bring those boards over? The sooner, the better. Count on built the better for business. All those gimcracks you've got around are for sale, too, aren't they? You know, I believe you got a surefire hunch about this thing."

"Do you really think so?" she asked eagerly, all pride and resentment forgotten. "I have to do something—and this seems the best I can do under the circumstances. I happened to glance at this cabin and the idea came to me."

"It was a swell idea, all right. Come to think of it, I never saw a hot dog stand fail yet, did you?"

"I don't think I have," reflected Sally.

"I've got some fine ideas, myself," reflected the young man. "If I were you, Miss Rutherford, I'd plant the brightest, hardest flowers I could get against this cabin, and I'd call the place 'Sally's Shack'."

"I wouldn't call it anything but. It's a mighty nice little name sort of friendly-like. Come to think of it, I reckon Sally is my favorite name," his eyes upon her were free from guile. "So I vote to call the place 'Sally's Shack.' Because it is," he finished unanswerably.

"O!" said she, bewildered. "Very well, the name shall be 'Sally's Shack'."

"Great. Now about those flowers I want you to plant. Of course, it's too late in the season for seeds, but I think I could transplant some zinnias, say, and petunias, and calendulas, and salvia."

"Really, I can't take everything from you, Mr. Forman. Why, I work right next door to you."

"Does being neighborly include building shelves, and counters, and planting flowers?" she asked with some asperity.

"I yes, it includes heaps more," said he, still without a shadow of guile. "It even includes," he added with a light laugh, "giving a neighbor hot dogs to keep him from going hungry when he's driving his car."

And he set about measuring the windows, making figures in a little notebook he carried in a pocket. He was one of those who hunt to themselves when they're thinking and sing when they're actively working.

"What is that you're singing?" asked Sally.

"Long out of date before you were born," said the milkman absently. The students used to sing it—in the middle ages, you know. Still absently he hummed "Flor de Espina—"

"What!" Sally's eyes widened.

He waked up with a jerk. Turning, he smiled—his friendly, guileless smile. "One of our professors lectured on that once—medieval students' songs, I mean. It seems they used to like this one especially. It's pretty. I think, Flor de Espina—Flower of Thorns."

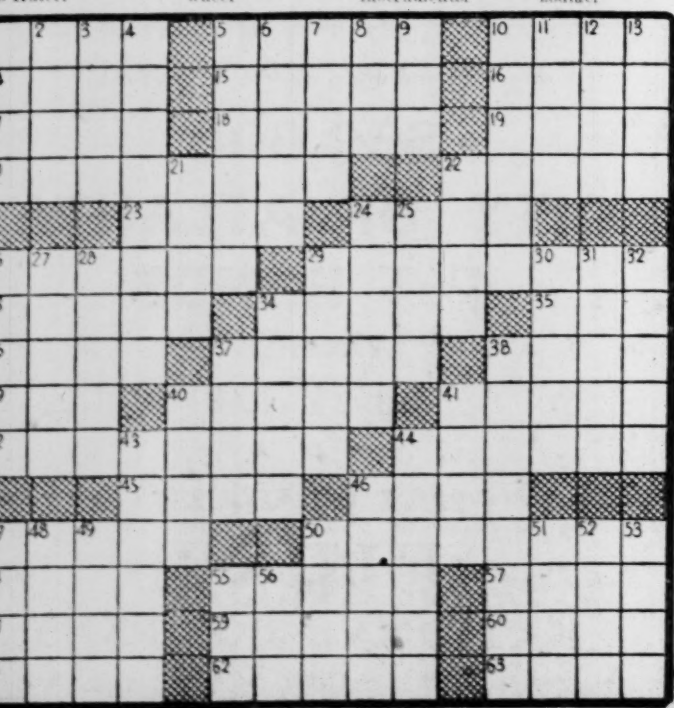

"You seem to have learned quite a variety of things in that school,"
